Telling our Stories for Advocacy Impact

Meet Diane Jones

- Tobacco-Free Ohio asked Diane to record a radio ad and featured her in newspaper advertisements.
- Nearly 100 people per day took action on the website while the advertisements ran.

I quit smoking 23 years ago on Mother’s Day in 1990 and I thought I was home free. But I continued to be exposed to secondhand smoke. When they told me that I had COPD (Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease), it was like someone hit me with a shovel. The hardest part is that it shortened my lifespan and I have five kids.

My best friend Sherry died five years ago from lung cancer at the age of 50 and she never smoked. But she was a bartender, and worked at restaurants in Cleveland. And when I have a crisis in my life or a happy bit of news, I want to call her, but I can’t. Neither can her kids.

Restaurant and bar workers exposed to secondhand smoke have 200 times the acceptable risk for lung cancer and 2,000 times the acceptable risk for heart disease.

Stories are among our most powerful advocacy tools – but it takes some skill to tell them well.

Quick opportunity to capture attention
Less is more – really!!
The goal is to generate interest, create curiosity
What matters to us isn’t always relevant or impactful
Emotions are tricky
Who is your audience?
What do you want them to think or understand?
What do you want them to feel?
What do you want them to do?
27-9-3 Rule
Cardiac arrest kills 250,000 people yearly. In 2001, one of these people was my husband Joel. If an AED had been available, it could have saved his life.
Despite having private health insurance, the out of pocket costs of co-pays and deductibles from my son’s three open heart surgeries caused devastating medical debt.
Do’s and Don’t’s

Do:
- Revise and practice until you are comfortable – say it out loud!
- Have an elevator message and a FEW bullet points as follow up
- Be yourself
- Use visuals
- Remember the goal is to generate questions and interest

Don’t:
- Try to be a lobbyist
- Ramble or talk too long
- Take reactions personally
Expanding on your elevator message

- Less is still more
- Stay focused
- Let bullet points guide you
- Allow for questions and conversation
- Allow the lobbyist (sometimes that’s you) to connect your story to the policy ask
There are two ways to share knowledge… You can push information out or you can pull them in with a story.
Thank you!!!
